The sentimental novel or the novel of sensibility is an 18th-century literary genre which celebrates the emotional and intellectual concepts of sentiment, sentimentalism, and sensibility. Sentimentalism, which is to be distinguished from sensibility, was a fashion in both poetry and prose fiction beginning in the eighteenth century in reaction to the rationalism of the Augustan Age. Sentimental novels relied on emotional response, both from their readers and characters. They feature scenes of di

Sentimental novel - Wikipedia

A Sentimental Novel is presented in 239 numbered paragraphs (plus a closing line) and tells a fairly simple story. The main characters are "Ann-Djinna, more often called Gigi" (a name she comes to feel she has outgrown by the end, when she prefers Gynée ("or more simply Gyn (pronounced the American way: Djinn)")), who is not yet fifteen, and her father.

A Sentimental Novel - Alain Robbe-Grillet

An emotionally extravagant novel of a kind that became popular in Europe in the late 18th century. Partly inspired by the emotional power of Samuel Richardson's Pamela, or Virtue Rewarded (1740), the sentimental novels of the 1760s and 1770s exhibit the close connections between virtue and sensibility, in repeatedly tearful scenes; a character's feeling for the beauties of nature and for the griefs of others is taken as a sign of a pure heart.

Sentimental novel - Oxford Reference

The sentimental novel exalted feeling above reason and raised the analysis of emotion to a fine art. An early example in France is Antoine-François Prévost's Manon Lescaut (1731), the story of a courtesan for whom a young seminary student of noble birth forsakes his career, family, and religion and ends as a card shark and confidence man.
