Mucha volunteered to produce a lithographed poster within two weeks, and on 1 January 1895, the advertisement for the play Gismonda by Victorien Sardou was posted in the city, where it attracted much attention. Bernhardt was so satisfied with the success of this first poster that she began a six-year contract with Mucha.

Mucha designed a set of postcards for 1900, each depicting one month of the year. In the sketch for November, we can see how the artist used color to create depth and dimension to what could otherwise be a busy and fairly flat composition. Lot 146: Le Carillon de Paques / Easter Bells, preparatory pencil sketch, circa 1896.

Alphonse Mucha: Behind the Magic - Swann Galleries News

Alphonse Mucha is synonymous with Art Nouveau, a style of fine art, decorative art, and architecture that broke with the academicism of the 19th century in favor of florid lines inspired by the natural environment. A lithographed advertising poster he was commissioned to create for a play featuring the celebrated actress Sarah Bernhardt in 1894 catapulted him out of obscurity and brought him instant success as a commercial artist.
